INFLUENZA BROUGHT TO CAMP BY SELECTIVES IN QUOTA SENT FROM EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS

Epidemic Started With Three Cases in New England Battalion—Nearly All Deaths in Same Unit—Majors Thompson and Coumbe Believe Crisis Passed.

THE POST-STANDARD this morning is enabled to reveal for the first time the exact chronological history of the epidemic influenza as it has swept the Syracuse Recruit Camp since its outbreak Monday of State Fair week.

Major Arthur F. Thompson, camp surgeon, and Major A. G. Coumbe, M. C., from the surgeon-general's office at Washington, sent here to study and aid in combating the disease, are authority for the facts.

The most important in the minds of the surgeons is the fact that the charts of the camp show the disease is on the decline.

From that date the epidemic spread and there is steady lessening in the number of cases which have dropped from 1,100 to 800.

At the present time approximately 1,100 cases of epidemic influenza are being cared for in connection with the camp.

The influenza was brought to the Syracuse camp by men sent out in Eastern Massachusetts. The original cases were discovered in Boston.

Deaths reported yesterday were James B. Hall, Marquette, Mead, Robert Makard, Clatsop, N. E. Joseph, Huntington, Massachusetts, L. E.

Henry Madorsky, New York city, Archie McQuinn, Fort Lee, Mich. Delta Ashford.
