32 Nurses Sick

This is true of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, where 32 nurses are off duty, suffering from the malady. An idea of the seriousness of the epidemic can be seen in the case of the Homso-pathic Hospital, which has retused admission to 600 influenza patients.

In the cities and towns surrounding the city, the conditions are almost as bod. Temporary hospitals have been paned, but the lack of nurses and physicians is now the other handless with the seriousness. The department stores who have trained girl clerks in first all methods, have been asked to relieve workers for this cause. These helpers, health officials say, can not as auxiliary nurses, and in many cases can be as useful as fully trained nurses. In Cambridge most of the school feachers have voluntered.

City Clearing House

Yesterday it was decided to establish a city hospital clearing house, where information will be available each day as to accommodations at the hospitals, and to handle appeals for nurses and doctors for influenza victims. This is to be done in order to systematize the work, and to minimize the trouble of the families of sick patients who up to now have wasted much valuable time in finding an institution where the patients can be treated.

Doctors held a ray of hope last night for a continuance of yesterday's fair weather. The Weather Bureau promises fair weather for today and tomorrow, which the medical man hope will have the today and comproved the tendency of lessening the number of new cases. A spell of bright, frosty weather, they say, would be most acceptable.

Mopping up the country on the American left, involved suif, fighting in the region of Charpentry, which continued until inte in the day. The Germans left strong detachments of machine gunnars flanking, the town, and it was considered wise to supplement the infantry swork with that of artillery, which was placed in position at midday.

The big jump yesterday, combined with rain-scaked roads and the Germans destruction of their lines of communication, interferred with the movement of the first of the artillery. Upon the arrival of the artillery in positions near the town, the situation slowly changed, resulting in the withdrawal of such of the Germans as were able to sacap.
