Innovations in Teaching & Mentoring Family Scholars & Practitioners

Editor

Brad van Eeden-Moorefield, MSW, PhD, CFLE
Central Michigan University

Submission of original research and critical reviews are encouraged on all topics related to the teaching and mentoring of family scholars and practitioners, including students and new professionals. Of particular interest are articles that present innovative teaching techniques, perspectives from practitioners in the field about what skill sets new professionals need to transition successfully from student to practitioner, and on the mentoring of new faculty and or graduate students. Additionally, we encourage submissions from students and the inclusion of their voices and perspectives in MFR. Submit manuscripts electronically by August 1, 2009 to Dr. Brad van Eeden-Moorefield <vaneelbm@cmich.edu>

For information about submissions please see: <http://quod.lib.umich.edu/m/mfr/about.html>
