NORWOOD IN FRONT RANKS

In Urging Support of Liberty Loan For Her Sons Overseas.

Fully 50 per cent of Norwood's population attended heroes' day services in the auditorium of the Municipal Building yesterday afternoon. The committee for the district, Rev. C. R. Stauffer, Chairman; Rev. F. A. Gallagher and Rev. George Lawton, found it necessary to arrange for overflow meetings in the Council chamber and at Main and Elm avenues.

Mayor Engelhardt opened the services in the auditorium with an address in which he paid tribute not only to the American soldiers overseas, but to those men and women in the United States who are providing the "sinews of war" and creating the national interest essential to win a decisive victory over the Huns.

Rev. Mr. Stauffer, who presided, introduced Rev. W. T. Stockstill, who offered an invocation. Rev. Mr. Lawton spoke on "The Glory of the Day."

Prof. C. A. Wilson who had charge of the war savings campaign among Cincinnati public school children, said "Young America" is playing an important part in creating a "win-the-war" spirit in America.

Father Gallagher said conserving wheat, coal and gasoline in the United States were not sufficient to win the war, as the conflict would have been ended before the autumn leaves began to fall if conservation only was essential to destroy militarism. Buying fourth liberty loan bonds "until it hurts," he said, would enable the allies to plant the flag of freedom in Berlin

CALL TO DUTY

In Loan Drive, Sounded By Rev. M. P. O'Brien, at Cumminsville.

"From the din and smoke of battle comes to us over miles of land and sea the message 'We will take care of things over here; do your duty at home.'" Rev. Matthew P. O'Brien declared at Heroes' Day services at Northside playgrounds, Cumminsville, yesterday afternoon, in an appeal for support of the fourth liberty loan.

"The boys are doing the fighting and it is up to us to do the digging," Father O'Brien added. "Dig hard and dig deep. Send Cincinnati over the top in the fourth liberty loan."

"God is alongside our boys on the battle front and will take care of them," declared former Mayor Louis Schwab.

Mr. Schwab asserted "liberty bonds have the best security of any bonds on earth. The Government is behind each one. Every piece of property and every building in the United States is the security you have for your liberty bond."

"Let us roll up our sleeves and then roll battle for the ideals which make men resolute, strong and brave, to save the world from autocratic rule, and, as they go, the nation's prayers, its hopes, its obligations go with them.

"As our soldiers in battle offer the supreme sacrifice of their lives, there is the imperative duty upon all, men and women alike, here, behind the firing line, to render every patriotic service, to give every financial aid and make every sacrifice in response to each national call.

"There is no more secure investment in all the world than bonds of a government which never has repudiated an obligation."

Other speakers were Rev. C. W. Smith, Rev. Edward A. Ryan, Mayor William B. Hay and Richard Crane.

DOLLARS AND BLOOD

Pledged To Vindicate Principles, Says Rev. Charles F. Goss.

"It is because our principles have been outraged that we have undertaken this vast struggle. To the vindication of our principles we pledge every dollar of our money and every ounce of our blood," declared Rev. Charles Frederic Goss, pastor emeritus of Avondale Presbyterian Church, at Heroes' Day services yesterday on the lawn of Avondale public school.

"The German nation has insulted and trampled upon truth, upon liberty, upon justice," added Rev. Dr. Goss. "It has assailed the foundations of the moral system. It has denied the bases of our religious faith. To sit down supinely while these realities are insulted and trampled in the dust is treason to our moral natures. This nation, true to its sense of moral obligation, has risen as one man to avenge the attack upon the citadel of its life."

Rabbi David Philipson said

"If ever men and nations in the course of history fought for a just cause, then truly the United States and the allies are doing so now. What more just and righteous cause can be imagined than the struggle for democracy against autocracy, for the divine right of the people against the divine right of the mailed fist, for the self-determination of nations against the dictation of the conqueror's brute force?"

Rev. A. G. Beresford offered the invocation, and Rev. Francis Kelly led a recitation of a pledge of loyalty. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Louis G. Hoeck. T. J. Lewis, Chairman Liberty Loan Committee, urged purchase of liberty bonds.

PAY PERSHING.

[By William F. Kirk.]

How can we pay Pershing for all he has done
In flouting all danger and routing the Hun?

How can we pay Pershing for saving the cause
Gainst tyrants who broke all humanity's laws?

How can we pay Pershing for leading so well
The legions of right 'gainst the legions of hell?

Not in singing his praises nor shouting his name
This man is a fighter who cares not for fame.

How can we pay Pershing? Our thanks can be shown
By over-subscribing this liberty loan.

ARMY MAN TAKES BRIDE.

An order which recalled Private Charles Schleicher, Tank Corps, to Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Penn., when he was passing a furlough at his home in Ft. Thomas, brought to light yesterday an army romance, which has culminated in the marriage of Private Schleicher and Miss Garnett Eloise Medlowcroft, of Ft. Thomas. They were married August 10, at Lexington, Ky. The bride is the needs, [illegible] to save the company. The lyric is [illegible] night.

The story begins in Washington Square, New York, in 1850. Ottilie Van Zandt, 22, is in love with an apprentice under her father's employ, Dick Wayne. With a pledge of her love on her 21st birthday, But the Van Zandt family [illegible] down upon the union and Ottilie is married to her [illegible]. Dick Wayne leaves for Africa to seek his fortune. But before they leave they plant in a couple tree as the sign of their undying affection. The second act moves them up 15 years. It is the day of Ottilie's birthday and his museum. The lovers are again and Dick is married to Ottilie's friend. The third episode is in the eighties. The Van Zandt family fortune has been squandered and the mansion is to be sold at auction. But the apple tree is in bloom and the little grandchildren are playing in its shade. Dick Wayne buys the property. The final episode brings the action up to the modern time, when the grandchildren of Ottilie and Dick take up the happiness denied their ancestors.

All this is charmingly told. The successive pictures are unusually interesting historical comments on the history of New York and the musical interpolations are a lovely accompaniment to the romance as unfolded by the dialogue. Rida Johnston Young wrote the book and Sigmund Romberg the music.

The kindest things which can be said of the company at the Lyric is that the members are doing the best they can. But they are incapable. No other description is possible. With the exception of Harry B. Lester as the gay Lothario, Mathew Van Zandt, the others had best remain unsung. The scenic settings show wear and tear, but the costumes are pretty and picturesque. The orchestra plays the music well, though the singing never realizes its beauties. It is just one more case—and this time a most flagrant one—of fine possibilities spoiled by an incompetent aggregation of players.

J. H. T.

THE KEITH SHOW.

In the course of a season at B. F. Keith's there will be many good bills, and occasionally there will be one which is not so good. The bill which opened yesterday is one of the latter. It has a degree of merit, but seems to lack the high quality which generally characterizes the programs at this theater. There is a superabundance of music in the first place, and nothing particularly sweeping to make up for the lack of contrast and novelty.

The best and most pretentious act on the bill is that of the Rigoletto Brothers, who present a little vaudeville turn all their own, under the caption "Around the World." They do a great variety of stunts, from magic to art poses, and the "one-man band" is one of the best things of its kind seen in vaudeville. Maud Earl, assisted by Harry G. Keenan, sings a number of vocal selections, operatic and popular, in a pleasing manner, though not very thrilling, and Phil Kelley and Joe Galvin supply the only real comedy act of the show. Galvin, as the Italian, is especially successful in stirring up some hearty laughs.

The Four Haley Sisters, a quartet of sweet, do fairly well. Elmer El Cleve has a xylophone act in which he displays [illegible] which opens the bill well. Corey and Webb next with a dearth of [illegible] in their skit. Charles Ahearn, who rides many queer bicycles, and his troupe were delayed on account of train troubles and did not appear. They are expected to-day.

CAMPAIGN STARTED

To Maintain Racing in New O[illegible] During Coming Winter.

[illegible] Sept. 29.—Steps to maintain racing at the Fair Grounds during the coming winter were started here yesterday when Business Men's Racing Association was formed. Chief among the members of the association are Mayor Behrman and Commissioner of Public Buildings and Parks Paul Capdevielle. The association will petition the Louisiana Legislature to amend the present law governing racing in this state so that it will be possible to hold the meetings.

The business men's association as well as the Jockey Club of North Louisiana, which maintains the track, are under the control of the Louisiana Racing Commission, which will confer with the Legislature on the matter. The Commission will meet in New Orleans on October 7 to discuss the matter.

Directors of both associations say that the Fair Grounds track is now in splendid condition and that there is no reason why racing should not be continued. The Business Men's Association was formed in New Orleans during the Civil War, when racing was prohibited by the Louisiana Legislature. The Fair Grounds track is now [illegible] Belgium, and [illegible] which [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
