Mallory & Wright's Pathologic Technic

For this edition the work has been subjected to a most critical revision. There has been added new matter on Goodpasture's acid polychrome methylene-blue stain for frozen sections of fixed tissue and also for demonstrating metachromatically the different granules in the islet and acinar cells of the pancreas; Graham's oxidase stain for the granules in the myeloblastic series of cells and leukocytes; Benians' Congo red method for the demonstration of spirochetes; Claudius' stain for flagella; the approved method of classifying pneumococci with reference to serum treatment; the use of the safety-razor blade in section cutting; benzené in paraffin embedding; and Rubaschkin's method of fixing celloidin and frozen sections to the slide for staining.

Octavo of 555 pages, with 181 illustrations. By FRANK B. MALLORY, M.D., Associate Professor of Pathology, Harvard Medical School; and JAMES H. WRIGHT, M.D., Pathologist to the Massachusetts General Hospital. Cloth, $3.75 net.
