Pending settlement of this question of naval armament it was stated, one guess is as good as another in regard to the disposition of the surrendered vessels.

not to poison him, and so he wasn't interested enough to even look down. Perhaps he thought it was happy Jack Squirrel.

On her part, Black Pussy had not discovered Prickly Porky. She was too much interested in watching Old Man Coyote on the ground to even glance up. She watched Old Man Coyote disappear, but she wasn't fooled, as Old Man Coyote hoped she would be. She guessed that he had simply hidden, hoping that she would come down out of the tree and thus give him a chance to catch her. But as I said before, Black Pussy wasn't foolish. You see she had tried that very, very often herself when hunting Nibbler the Mouse or Robber the Bat. So she just made up her mind that she would just stay in that tree so long that Old Man Coyote would get tired of waiting and would go off.

After a while Prickly Porky finished his breakfast. He decided that he would stretch his legs. Even slow-moving Prickly Porky needs a little exercise. So still chewing the last little strip of bark he had pulled from the tree, he began to climb down. You know when he climbs down he does it the same as you or I or Buster Bear would do. He never comes down head first.

New Prickly Porky cannot move without rustling and rattling the thousand little spears hidden in his coat. They rustled and rattled now. Black Pussy heard them. She looked up. It was the first time she had seen him. She was shocked. She had never seen anything like him. He was the most terrible looking creature

she had ever seen. She was scared

but she was curious.

He was tall and thin, with a long, bony face, and a large, toothy smile. His eyes were dark and glittering, and his hands were dirty and covered with blood.

He was wearing a tattered shirt and a pair of torn pants.

He was covered in mud and blood, and he was shaking all over with fear.

He was trying to run away,

but he was too weak to move.

He was just sitting there,

shaking and trembling.

Black Pussy was

curious about him.
