GENERAL ELECTION OCCURS ON TUESDAY

Parties Guessing as to Results of Most Unusual Campaign in History of State—Nominates.

AFTER the most unusual campaign in the history of Idaho, both parties, on Monday, are being left with the responsibility of choosing the candidates to go before the voters, the warranty of the Idaho Constitution being that the voters shall be given a choice, in the election of 1918, of candidates for the legislature, the governorship, the U. S. Senate, the U. S. House of Representatives, the state Board of Education, all the judgeships and committees and all the political offices of the state.

The last few days of the campaign have been long and arid, the candidates, like the farmers, looking upon the election as a crop which will bring their reward or result in hardship and dearth. The harvest is now in view, and the farmer candidates are looking upon the voters as the men who will decide whether he shall be blest or cursed.

The campaign was unique in three ways—first, because the candidates were not to be nominated by assemblies of delegates, but were to be nominated by the people; second, because the candidates were to be elected by the same people and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.

The candidates are to be elected by the people, and not by the people of a district; and third, because the result of the campaign would be determined by the votes of the people, and not by the votes of the delegates to the state assemblies.