

with sanitary requirements will be closed up.

The attitude of the Fair association and the shows that are operating under contract with the association is that nothing should be allowed within the grounds that would be unsafe to the people who visit the fair.

The following statement has been made by the officers of the Southeastern Fair association:

After consultation with and at the request of Dr. Abercrombie, secretary of the state board of health, today the Southeastern Fair association will from now on enforce a rule that all visitors at the fair grounds must wear gauze "flu" masks while on the grounds.

The general conditions at Lakewood are good and are so recognized by the health officials. The danger, if any, is almost negligible. However, we prefer to be absolutely on the safe side.

The "flu" masks are easy to make at home or are on sale at the various leading drug stores. Wearing them occasions little or no discomfort and we feel sure that the patrons of the Southeastern fair will meet this request of the health authorities with the same good spirit of cooperation that they have shown in complying with other war restrictions as to food, light, power, etc.

We have a wonderful exhibition out here at Lakewood this week and we certainly hope that every one who possibly can will visit the Southeastern fair this season.

H. G. HASTINGS,

President Southeastern Fair Ass'n.

ROARS OF CHEERS SOUND FOR WILSON WHILE HE STROLLS

Washington, October 14.—While President Wilson's decision on Germany's note was being prepared for announcement at the white house and the state department, the president went downtown on a shopping trip. He drove to a jewelry store in one of the white house motors, but walked back up Pennsylvania avenue to the white house.

Pennsylvania avenue was black at the time with crowds of war workers just out of office. A great crowd surrounded the shop in which the president was, and when he appeared he was greeted with roars of cheers. Acknowledging the greetings, Mr. Wilson abandoned the motor and strode off up the avenue, walking alone and with secret service men to the side and behind.

Washington has gotten pretty used to seeing the president on the streets, but his appearance today, when the world has its eyes focussed upon him, least a touch of the dramatic to the incident.

The president wore a brown suit, a crown, soft hat and carried a walking stick. He was kept continually smiling and acknowledging greetings as he went along, carrying a small package, evidently the contents of his purchase.
