Soldiers will be given every assistance by stenographers in making out these proper letters and forms if desired.

BAKER PROMISES SPEED.

Some soldiers already have received their bonuses. I saw Secretary Baker last night and he said the same finance officer had been instructed to handle applications from this department with all dispatch possible.

He was most chagrined over the mistake in telegrams from the adjutant general, but said he found himself without clerical aids enough provided by Congress to rectify it. He promised to make up for it in the speed with which the applications were handled.

There are other matters soldiers want to know about—allotments, insurance, allowances, compensation, vocational training, other things. How can we help?

A MOTHER IS GRATEFUL.

Mrs. C. B. Peck of Hammond, Ind., writes:

"You said I would hear from my son the last of the month, and on the 28th I received two letters from him. The Soldier's Friend is a blessing to us. We mothers who have shed so many anxious tears for our dear boys surely enjoy the Soldier's Friend column, and for that matter, the entire Herald and Examiner brings us comfort."

SOLDIER HEARD FROM.

Has been instructed to communicate with his relatives at once. This information was forwarded to the Soldier's Friend by Captain E. Spidow, commanding officer of that company.

Chicago's Health
By DR. JOHN DILL ROBERTSON, Commissioner of Health.

See Your Doctor.

IT SEEMS to be quite evident that frequently when you have had the "flu" you are not yet thru.

It is quite natural, I take it, for the average person who has had influenza and so far recovered as to be able to return to work to think that he is all right.

Well, let us hope you are all right, but the chances are that you're not. Any good doctor will tell you that the after-effects of influenza are as serious, and sometimes worse, than the disease itself.

So, I would say to those who have had influenza, and who may be feeling its effects as evidenced by lack of their usual "pep" and vigor, that it would be wise for them to still keep in pretty close touch with their family doctor.

The statistics of some of the leading insurance companies show that their heaviest death losses have occurred during the year immediately following an outbreak of influenza. And that these deaths were due in large measure to the after-effects of this disease.

Influenza has a tendency to weaken the heart and kidneys or the lungs; and unless one is careful to follow a physician's advice serious illness may result. The point I am getting at is, that if you feel that the attack has left you physically below par, see your doctor. And I am not making this suggestion to put money into the doctor's purse, but to lengthen your days in the land "which the Lord thy God hath given thee."

The records of the department of health show that up to Jan. 1 of this year there were 43,533 cases of influenza in Chicago, with 6,905 deaths. And this means that the advice I am giving in this space today applies to over 40,000 people who have had influenza and "who live to tell the tale." To these 40,000 survivors I say, see your doctor.
